Predictive Services Discussion:

Low afternoon relative humidity of $5-20 \%$ will continue, albeit with lighter winds, across much of the Southwest and west Texas today. Poor overnight humidity recovery will continue west of the Rio Grande Valley, but good recovery is expected from the central New Mexico mountains to the southern High Plains. Temperatures will rise to above normal across much of the Intermountain West as well, but winds will remain light. A cold front stretching from the eastern Great Lakes to the Lower Mississippi Valley will move to the Gulf and East Coasts. Widespread showers and thunderstorms will develop across the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic but will be isolated to scattered across the Lower Mississippi Valley and Southeast. Hot temperatures will continue across much of Florida, with minimum relative humidity below $30 \%$ and gusty afternoon sea breezes. Drier conditions are expected across much of Interior Alaska today with near normal temperatures, while moderate trade winds and occasional windward showers continue across Hawai'i.
