His large and lengtheoed experience in the treatment of all those diseasee having a special origin, and which so insiduously undermine the constitution, have too long been a scauge to the human r.cc. There is no tissue or structure in the tody exempt from the ravages of these complaints—the skin, the bones, and, I may justly say, every ergan in the body. Were I to enumerate all the complaints the result of the cause alloued to, I could exercely exclude any to which the norma body is libbe, as they are all more or less influenced by the axistence in the bleed of the specific poison referred to.

Dr. TRENERY heres pare with the new and scientific discoveries of this enlight and age, and is in constant communication with the great European cities. By these mean there are no new books written, or new medicines applicable to these complaints, that he coes not add to his already valuable collection.
