Perth has waited thirteen year for "Utopia Limited," but such an open October 16.—Chas, Sommers—Splendid is worth waiting for. If it does not city residential site, Colin-street, is worth waiting for. If it does not achieve quite such a popular success a through any failure on the part of librettist and composer, any lack of splendor in the mounting, or any weakess in the interpretation. All W. S. Gilbert's operas are more or less satrical, but this is all satire. As the country satirised is England, Australian auiences may not fully appreciate some of the local allusions but on the other hand they have the familiar satisfaction of seeing a near and dear relative attacked. Last night's production by Mr. I C Williamson's Opera Company, under the direction of Henry Bracy, was not exceeding £25, as recommended by very favorably received. Many encore the works committee in clause 3 of ed. Those who know him (and audience laughed when he made lov (unsuccessfully at first) to the hightoned English governess, Lady Sophy, or got his Field-Marshal's sword be tween his legs, or embraced the de butantes at the "drawing-room" with nore than kingly fervor. The monarch's return from England is fraught with such astonishing consequences to the land of Utopia, was impersonated by Miss Olive Godwin, who looked well sang well, and played well. A voyage is a recognised opportunity for love making, and it was not surprising to find that the Princess's escort, Capta Fitzbattleage, of the First Life Guards had taken advantage of his opportunity

There were two other candidates for possible chance against the leading tenor. Fortunately Mr. Charles Kenningham was available for his origina character, Fitzbatleaxe, which he play ed with just a suspicion of the "haw the British officer, and with the right touch of exaggeration in his more operatic moments. The beauti ful love duets with Zara "Oh, Admirable Art." and "Words of "A Tenor, all Singers Above," in which Mr. Kenningham skilfully imitated the tenor who breaks down in his cadenza, was doubly encored. In the absence of Miss Aggie Thorn, who has been prevented by illness from visiting Perth. Miss Dolly Castles an peared as the demure maiden. Frank Wilson played Mr. Goldbury company promoter, with easy as urance, and greatly pleased the hous with the satirical song, which described how "Some Seven Men Form an Association." But his best effor as a vocalist was the song in praise o the "Bright and Beautiful English Girl." In this opera there is much ironical praise of England and thing English, but perhaps the tribute to feminine excellence is not altogether excellent Lady Sophy. She thoroughly understands how to play this fa miliar character of Gilbertian operathe elderly but amorous lady-and her scenes with the King excited abundan mirth. There was a strong deman for the repetition of the didactic sone "Bold-faced Ranger." Mr. Arthur H. H. Wallace, as the slightly younger but more feeble. Phantis, was equally successful. It was a happy thought on the part of the librettist to oring in once more the Captain of the Pinafore-now Sir Edward Corcora (Mr. Ronald Hogue)-and to remine us of the days when the question g man, evidently a stranger to 'What, never?" was a household word. Special mention should be made of the naccompanied chorus, "Eagle High On Cloudland Soaring," in which the pitch was well sustained. A repetition, though evidently desired, was no granted. The opera is one which no only deserves but demands a second hearing. Many beauties in the score and many subtleties in the dialogue may be missed by those who pay only
