Supplementary Fig. 2. The GenePattern software architecture is based on flexible SOAP interfaces allowing multiple clients and programming languages to access a single underlying pipeline engine and module repository with built-in support for reproducible in silico research.