A CRICKET TRAGEDY

One of the tragedies of Australian cricket is that Bert Ironmonger, the Queensland and Victorian left-arm bowler, never visited England with an Australian team. Vic. Richardson, former South Australian and Austra-lian captain attributes this to English propa-ganda—the careful, sedof the 1921 Australian team in New Zealand, of which he and Ironmonger were members.

Richardson Blames English Propaganda for omission of Bert Ironmonger from Teams going abroad

Richardson

JACK CRAWFORD'S DAVIS CUP MEMOIRS

It was a Bitter Shock for the 1935 Davis Cup Team when they were ...

Defeated by lia's biggest seasons facing us—the Melbourne Centenary carnival-with a host of leading overseas players competing.

The visitors included Fred Perry, who by then was U.S.A. national champion, G. P. Hughes. Roderick Menzel, Georgio de Stefani, C. Boussus, J. Brugnon, V. G. Kirby, H. Malcolm, and B. Maier.

